as the first tiebreaker. For example, a team that wins two matches 2-0 and loses one 1-3 will sit ahead of a side with the same points but a lower goal margin. Beyond points, the CONCACAF League of Nations uses head-to-head results when teams are level on points and goal difference. This means that a direct victory over a rival can vault a side into the knockout stage even if overall statistics look similar. Live feeds provide minute-by-minute updates, showing goal timestamps, scorers, and cards. They are ideal for fans watching a match in real time and need instant awareness of momentum shifts. Summary tables, however, compile results after each matchday, offering a snapshot of points, goals for, and goals against. Actionable tip: Use the live feed for immediate excitement, but switch to the summary table the following morning to spot trends—such as a team consistently scoring early or conceding late—that can inform predictions for upcoming fixtures.
