Open for more info! Hello everyone! Today's video is all about Texas Tech University (TTU) has rolled out a new academic schedule framework designed to help students navigate course selection, time management, and degree planning with unprecedented clarity. By aligning the traditional "Plan-Do-Act-Check" system with the university's course catalog, TTU's insider tips aim to streamline the semester planning process for everyday students. The new approach borrows the classic PDAC cycle, turning abstract planning into a concrete, visual roadmap. Each semester begins with a "Plan" phase, where students map out required courses, electives, and core competencies. Next, the "Do" stage involves registering and attending classes while keeping an eye on workload and credit limits. "Act" is the feedback loop—students assess mid-term performance and adjust strategies accordingly. Finally, "Check"
