calculators operate on two inputs: month, day, and year of birth. Behind the scenes they reference the lunisolar calendar, automatically adjusting for leap months and the shifting start of Chinese New Year (usually between January 21 and February 20). The result—your animal sign and its associated element (Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal, or Water)—appears instantly. Select a trustworthy site. Look for domains ending in .org, .edu, or recognized news outlets; avoid pop-up heavy pages. Enter your full birth date. The tool will automatically adjust for the Chinese New Year transition if you were born in late January or early February. Review the output. You'll see the animal, its element, and a short personality snapshot. Some calculators also provide a "compatible signs" chart.
